ASCANIO BIRDING TOURS

www.ascaniobirding.com

As I write this review today June 4, 2008, it has been a year since Neil and his friend came to bird the rich-bird area of Eastern Venezuela. This was the second trip for some of them, since back in 2005 we had already birded the northwest part of the country.

During the trip we saw all the tepui endemics you can virtually see in Sierra de Lema and the Gran Sabana. For that, we certainly put a lot of field time! From the common Tepui Brush-Finch to the beautiful Roraiman Barbtail, we had Tepui Foliage-Gleaner, Rose-collared Piha, Red-banded Fruiteater, Great Elaenia while also enjoyed some yet-to-be-split new tepui endemic species. We were even rewarded with our last tepui endemic species just twenty minutes before dusk, of the very last day: 3 individuals of Peacock Coquette!

Paria and Rio Grande were equal productive, with impressive view of two adult Harpy Eagle, White-plumed Antbird and several Paria endemic species.

In Rio Grande we came across a small Tyrannidae, which took me a year to confirm its presence (on my of trips to the area in May 2008). Based on my field notes, recordings and comparison among species, now I can confirm that we saw Cinnamon Neopipo, being only the second sight of such species in Delta Amacuro, so add to your list for Venezuela! Of course, not to forget is the Red-legged Tinamou walking nicely in the forest interior of El Avila national park.

As I explained to all of you during the trip, in mid 2007 I commit to write the text for a new field guide to the Birds of Venezuela, thus this being the reason for such a delayed inventory.

I hope to see you all again. Maybe in the Perija mountains or in northern Colombia!
